To Whom it may concern,

Re: Alithia Education

This letter is to confirm our commitment to the design and development of cultural content in arts and environment for the Alithia learning Inc's proposed workshops and exhibit.

Flying Fish Blue is an Australian indigenous-owned company that specialises in socio-cultural and ecological assessment and cultural arts advisory services. We design, develop and implement solutions that incorporate indigenous ecological knowledge systems and principles into business and project planning for greater ecological, social, economic and spiritual outcomes. Our aim is to support our clients in achieving cultural content within their design. We also develop frameworks to facilitate communities through appreciation of custodianship and caring for the landscape and earth.

We can confirm that Chels Marshall, an Indigenous bio -science and cultural ecologist will work on Alithia for the first 2 years and aside from any unforeseen circumstances the anticipated negotiated term of the project.

Chels will provide input to design principles, cultural ecological concepts, Aboriginal artist management and also provide direction and support of community governance strategies.

The uniqueness and vision for Alithia is an exciting time for the north coast and Australia. Flying Fish Blue are dedicated in being a part of this shift in education and art design and recognise the application of personal and organisational commitment required to fulfil this project.

Yours sincerely
